SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. – A group of students from the district’s School of Education and Training (a.k.a. SET Academy) spent a day this week at Seton Hall University touring the campus and learning about the programs at the school’s College of Education and Human Services.

“A day like the one our SET Academy students had today makes the idea of going to college less abstract and more concrete for our students,” said Superintendent of Schools Eileen Shafer. “Now that they have been on a college campus, they can visualize the opportunities they are working toward when they come back to our classrooms. I want to thank Dr. Edmund Adjapong and everyone at Seton Hall University for providing our students with this great opportunity.”

SET Academy is one of Paterson Public School’s 12 “choice” high schools, and it focuses on preparing students for careers in education. Many of the students aspire to become teachers. Today’s trip to Seton Hall University was an opportunity for SET Academy students to experience a bit of college campus life, as well as to meet the faculty and administration of the College of Education and Human Services.
